

ARTIST STATEMENT

OLIVIA JANE ART

“I’m so grateful to have been asked to paint this mural. The Phoenix has become a powerful symbol for us all in Los Angeles this year, and one that now strikes particularly close to me in the wake of surviving the Eaton fire. Unfortunately my art studio wasn’t so lucky. It has been a process to piece my life back together since, so I wanted to create a piece that honors each of these stages while holding a vision for the future. It has been incredible to see the community come together so strong and I can only wonder what we truly are capable of when we all work together.”

Olivia Jane is a figurative surrealist artist whose work is a reflection of her love for the wild, for mystery, and relationships between humans and the rest of the natural world. Olivia’s femme- centered and archetypal work invokes an ancient and yet every day magic with an emphasis on healing and transformation. This work asks the viewer for a moment of depth and reflection, in the midst of a chaotic world.

Olivia Jane spent her formative years living between Europe, South East Asia and the USA, with Cajun roots in south Louisiana, offering a unique experience of home. Life as a global nomad was influential from a multitude of perspectives and beliefs, ultimately Olivia is weaving her own unfolding story. Her current body of work focuses on relationships between spirit, landscape and story, often depicting therianthropic deities. Olivia Jane is a full-time artist, teacher and student currently based in Los Angeles, California.
